

MAN MISSING SINCE POLICE CONDUCT RAID

Officers Confiscate Alleged Liquors At Home On Washington Street.

APARTMENT ALSO SEARCHED FRIDAY

State police and Deputy Sheriff B. E. Bixler conducted two liquor raids in Gettysburg, Friday evening, but only one yielded any results.

At the home of Howard Strausbaugh, 400 South Washington street, the officers said they found about three gallons of alleged moonshine liquor in a 5-gallon crock on a table in the bathroom.

Seize Alleged Liquor

Strausbaugh was not at home when Sergeant R. W. Frutche and Troopers S. J. Walsh and J. F. Clemens, of the state police, and Deputy Sheriff Bixler appeared at the Strausbaugh home at 10:15 o'clock, Friday evening.

Two children were at home, and the officers, proceeding under authority of a search warrant, proceeded to search the place. The children said they did not know where their father was.

The alleged liquor was confiscated and taken to the state police barracks.

Second "Place" Visited

Efforts to locate Strausbaugh later in the night and this morning were futile. He was not at work at the furniture factory where he is employed nor was he at home today. Trooper Walsh visited the Strausbaugh home this morning, but received no response to his summons.

The officers also visited an apartment in the first block of Chambersburg street, Friday evening, but a thorough search of the place failed to reveal any contraband liquor.

Officers hold a warrant for Strausbaugh's arrest on a charge of illegal possession of liquor.

The search warrants were issued by Justice of the Peace John C. Shealer.

COURSES GIVEN FOR LEADERSHIP TRAINING CLOSE

Students Earn Ninety-eight Curriculum Units; Adopt Council Title.

CHURCHES MAY AID TEACHING

The Adams county leadership training school closed one of its most successful sessions, Friday evening, at the Lutheran theological seminary where the school has been in progress for three weeks. Ninety-eight units of international standard curriculum credits were earned by students representing almost every section of the county. Faculty members said they were well-pleased with the work completed.

A vote taken in the assembly period approved the present three-week type of school for 1933. The dates and other details were referred to the board of directors for final consideration.

Re-elected Directors The following were elected to succeed themselves on the board of directors: The Rev. G. E. Sheffer, New Oxford; Dr. E. J. Bowman, Gettysburg; the Rev. H. H. Hartman, Littlestown, and Mrs. Ira D. Henderson, Fairfield.

The title of the council was discussed at some length. It was voted that henceforth the name of the council should be The Adams County Council of Christian Education. It was further decided that training work in any locality of the county meeting the requirement of International council might be considered the work of the council and have the credits earned recorded on the files of the council in the seminary office at Gettysburg. In this way there will be a complete record of all standard work done in the county.

Seminary School to Specialize The council commended the teaching of general units to the work of local churches and communities. The Gettysburg school will then be able to lay special emphasis on specialization units and thereby render the fullest service to the county, officers said.

All work done by the council in cooperation with the Adams County Sunday School association. The fine spirit prevailing augurs well for the future development of a fine leadership and a superior type of Sunday school, vacation and week-day system of schools, officers asserted.

Officers for the ensuing year are president, the Rev. Paul Gladfelter, Abbotstown; secretary, the Rev. H. S. Fox, Gettysburg, and treasurer, C. C. Culp, Gettysburg.

2 ENVOYS HERE TO STUDY APPLE PACKING HOUSES

Reopening Of Argentine Market Depends On Impressions Gained Here.

GROWERS ATTEND LUNCHEON TODAY

Adams county's apple belt and methods of packing and storing apples were shown to Jaime Veyra and Jorge Spangenberg, of the Argentine republic's department of agriculture, this afternoon by a group of Adams and Franklin county fruit growers and shippers after luncheon at the Hotel Gettysburg at noon.

The tour of the fruit belt and packing and cold storage houses followed a brief tour of the battlefield. After touring Adams county, the two visitors were taken to Franklin county for a visit to its principal orchards and packing houses.

Two Approve Shipments

Reopening of the Argentine market to Adams county and Cumberland Valley apples hinges on the impressions received by the representatives of the South American country during their tour and from conferences which they held in Washington on Thursday and Friday.

Already 15,000 barrels of apples, approved by the Argentine representatives, have been shipped to that country as a test shipment. Stimulating local apple men is a market of considerable proportions. If Argentina is reopened to eastern shippers, it is believed that more than 100,000 barrels of apples will be shipped there each year.

Restrictions Hindered Trade

At one time Argentine republic was a good market for eastern apples. Then two years ago, under the Argentine import act, regulations were set up which required each apple to be wrapped in paper. This regulation imposed such a condition on shippers in the Cumberland Valley that it served practically to disbar apples from here. Few eastern apples have gone to Argentina since establishment of these regulations.

The visit of the Argentine republic agricultural representatives, with their influence, means simply if they are pleased with their conferences and with the conditions, they will reopen the market while here. But they are anxious to sell grapes. So agreements must be reached by exporting concerns sending out apples to receive and market Argentine grapes here.

600 Prisoners Refuse To Operate Their Machines In Penitentiary Pants Shop.

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 3 (AP)—While prisoners in the pants shop of the Maryland penitentiary sat idle at their machines today, carrying their strike into the second day, prison officials were expected to confer with the contractors who recently effected a new agreement with the state which reduces the prisoner's wages.

No signs of trouble appeared throughout the prison, the 600 inmates working in the shop merely going through their regular routine, but refusing to operate their machines.

Guards were on the alert for any possible outbreak, and officials said three dozen emergency officers were being kept in readiness in case their services were needed.

Heads of the Standard Overall company, which holds the contract with the state for the work, would not discuss the matter publicly, and suggested the next move rests with the welfare board.

LOTTERY CASE
IN NEW YORK
GOES TO JURY

Jurors Must Decide If Awards Were To Be Made "By Lot Or Chance."

New York City, N. Y., Dec. 3 (AP)—Federal lottery charges against Conrad H. Mann, Frank E. Hering, Bernard C. McGuire and Raymond Walsh, were given to a jury at 10:30 a. m. today. Judge Francis Coleman instructed the jurors that their principal task was "to determine whether or not at the time the defendants caused tickets to be sent across a state line, they had intentions to make awards by lot or chance."

Mann, a Kansas City business leader, is head of the bazaar department of the Fraternal Order of Eagles. As such, he contracted with McGuire to promote a fund raising enterprise which was known as the Eagles' "Charity Prolife and Dance."

Tickets Two-Fold
The evidence showed they agreed to divide the profits of the enterprise equally, each receiving ultimately $230,000. Hering received 33 1/3 per cent of Mann's share.

Under the contract, McGuire promoted a plan by which the Eagle members sold books of tickets for local dances. In addition to admitting the buyer to the dance, however, each ticket also allowed him to participate in a national distribution of $75,000 in cash prizes.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 3 (AP)—A belief developed among officials today that the note from six countries, which have asked for a further moratorium on their war debt payments, will be sent to congress by President Hoover, together with his annual message.

This paper, dealing with both internal and external affairs of the nation, will not be delivered on the opening day of congress, but on Tuesday.

However, in the absence of official word, there was no definite assurance that the note would be sent. Indications were that the manner of presenting the debt question to congress still remains to be settled, despite the eminence of the session.

Found In Well

Police Believe Victim Apparently Killed From Blow From Hickory Stick.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 3 (AP)—The mysterious death of Mrs. Lottie Shuman, 52, whose body was found dumped in a well in the rear of her Petersburg turnpike home, Friday, was the subject of close police investigation.

The body was found by Police Chief C. W. Smith, who said it was a case of murder. He said she apparently had been killed by a blow with a hickory stick found near by.

Chief Smith found the body in the well at the end of a trail of blood which led from the house which Mrs. Shuman inhabited alone.

He had gone to the house Thursday to investigate a report of a pistol being stolen. He failed to gain admittance. When he returned Thursday night again there was no response. He gained entrance through a window, according to instructions from Mrs. T. A. Fitzgerald, Mrs. Shuman's sister. Inside he found the blood that led to the well.

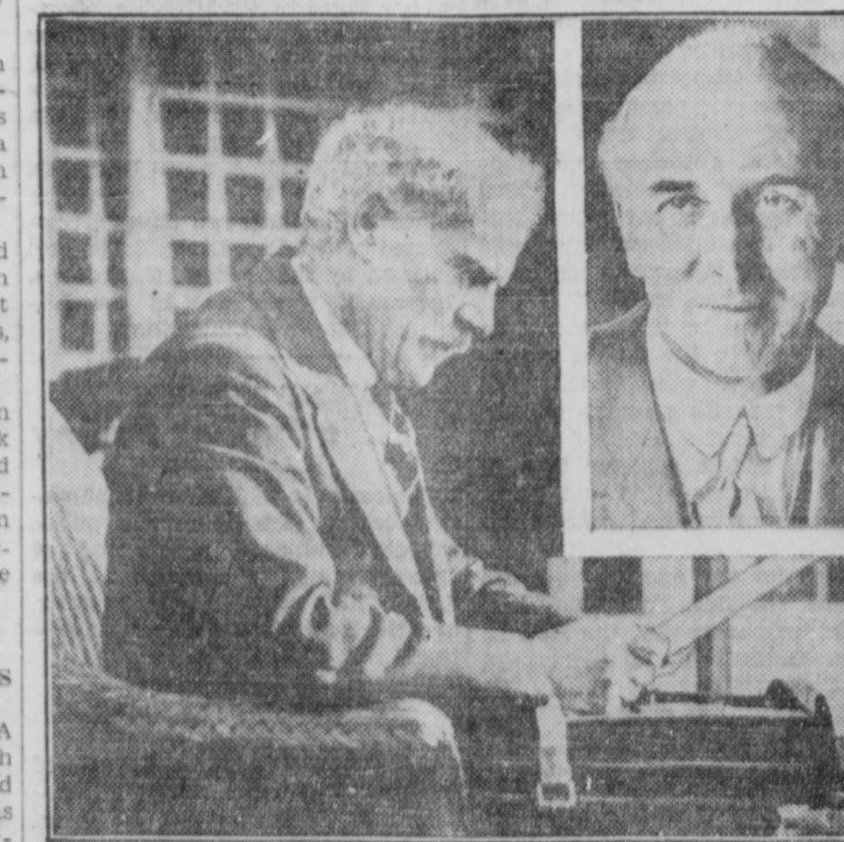

The house was in order and apparently no attempt had been made at robbery.

Mrs. Fitzgerald expressed the opinion that her sister had been killed in the morning, since breakfast dishes were found in the kitchen.

FAIR SKIES FOR GAME

Philadelphia, Dec. 3 (AP)—What the weather bureau described as typical Indian summer weather, prevails for the Army-Navy football game today. There was just a slight haze. The temperature was 57 an hour before the game, and the bureau predicted it would be in the lower 60's as the gridiron battle progressed.

MARCHERS ASK
HELP FROM CITY

Cumberland Mayor Makes Arrangements To Escort Army Through City.

Cumberland, Dec. 3 (AP)—Two representatives of the "marchers," a man and a woman, claiming to be the advance guards or scouts of the main body now hearing this city enroute to Washington, called on Mayor Henderson, at city hall today. They carried copies of various newspapers and asked the mayor if the stories regarding mobilization here were true.

They endeavored to impress Mayor Henderson with arguments as to rights of individuals and requested food and shelter from the city.

Mayor Henderson stated he had informed local representatives of the unemployment council that no food or shelter would be furnished here by the city or county government, and that arrangements made by the organization to house the marchers must be approved by the local police and health department.

When questioned as to reports that the army would be broken into small units here, Mayor Henderson explained that due to traffic conditions and narrow streets, it will be necessary to move the marchers through in small or scattered groups under police escort.

Bears Go Domestic

At Home Either On Or With A Gridiron.

Berkeley, Cal. (AP)—As the football season closed it was learned that several of the California team had gone "domestic."

Some undergraduate found that four from the varsity squad were enrolled in the household science department of the university, a realm usually devoted to women.

Athletic authorities explained that the gridiron players were not in a feminine environment from choice, but of necessity. The footballers were majoring in physical education, and dietetics is a compulsory subject.

Names of the students were not revealed because "the poor boys had suffered enough already."

Once Popular Star Makes Comeback After Years Of Hardship.

By Robbin Coons

Hollywood—Whenever a story like George Hackathorne's comes to light—and it's usually only when forgotten star gets a job of acting again—it inspires speculation as to how many other bright lights of yesterday are going through similar sieges of poverty.

We know a lot of actors who are having rough sledding at the moment, people who once knew luxury and now haven't a dime except the one they borrow for today's cup of coffee, but many of these go on pretending and living, to outward appearances, as though they hadn't lost an inch of ground.

Which is one reason Hackathorne's case was different. He pocketed his pride, took a cheap room, and weathered the depression with a philosophical cheerfulness that surmounted, I'm told, many a day that was foodless.

Troubles Overtake Him

Talking about his troubles now, George fails to give the usual excuses for his fall from prominence. Not very many years ago he basked in the full light of popularity, and enjoyed a big salary and all it afforded him.

What happened? A series of coincidental misfortunes that, taken singly, he might have weathered. First there was his health. Naturally frail and nervous, the intense parts he played brought on what he feared, a nervous breakdown. A trip to London to make a picture, intended for rest and change, proved arduous and led to more illness.

Came The Talkies

Then the talkies; stage actors, competition, less production and more actors out of work, he among them. A big opportunity came in Gloria Swanson's "Queen Kelly," but before his part was reached the film was shelved.

He did a few quickies, won several good parts that petered out in story changes. He had a call for "Journeys' End," and virtually signed, he was asked if he were British. He is not, and another payer took the part. The sequence in which he was to have played in "Grand Hotel" was dropped in the screen adaptation, and he took an insignificant role in "Night Court" instead.

Came months of idleness, penniless—and now the comeback, with Tom Mix in "Oh, Promise Me." Not much of a role, but a chance.

A Path To Paradise

By Coningsby Dawson

SYNOPSIS: Clive feels himself pushed again into the background, this time by his wife Santa's insatiable desire to reform her former husband, Dicky. Santa is so blind that Dicky persuades her he really is producing plays on Broadway until the name of Lou-Lou, long-time friend of Dicky's, comes into the fray. Then she understands; then also, Clive sees a possible ally in Lou-Lou.

Chapter 42

STAGE DOOR JOHNNY

"That's the best news I've heard in a long while."

She imitated his example by popping up.

"How's it good news?"

"It's good news to me," he insisted. "I could take a drink on it."

"But you don't realize." Her voice became awe-struck. "Dicky wouldn't make any woman an allowance for nothing."

"That's precisely what I do realize." In his joy he embraced his wife. "Here's luck to her digging!"

She pushed him aside.

"Either you don't understand or you're disgusting."

From then on, Santa began to attribute to Lou-Lou fresh crimes. She made her the scape-goat for Dicky. In the proportion that she was black, he was white. The theft of the polocoat was remembered and the fact that she might have been quoted as co-respondent. Her father was a plumber. Her hair was tinted. No one would have dreamed of her as an actress unless Dicky had backed her with money.

Clive in an inspired moment visualized Lou-Lou as an ally. If he could persuade her to pull on his end of the rope he might yet win this tug-of-war against Santa and her first husband.

If it was gorgeous for Santa to hold seances with Dicky, it would be equally gorgeous for himself to conspire with Lou-Lou. Even though Dicky were no more to Lou-Lou than a meal ticket, these nightly revival-meetings threatened her dominion. A chastened Dicky, arrayed in white robes, would certainly give her the go-by.

Clive was lacking in finesse. He had never had underhand dealings with women. To get in touch with Lou-Lou he chose the course that was most direct. Having waited till his wife and Dicky were settled for the evening, he slipped into his coat and hat.

Hearing movements, Santa called, "What are you doing, darling?"

"Appointment with a friend."

"That brought her into the hall on the run."

"What sort of friend?"

"Sort of business friend."

"That's a fib. You can't lie like the truth. Besides—"

He glanced back in the act of escaping.

"Besides what?"

"You mustn't leave me alone with Dicky."

"Santa, you're a fraud. Being alone with Dicky ought to be second nature."

As he bent his steps toward the glare of Broadway, he thought furiously. This Dicky business was becoming more serious than he'd anticipated. More serious than even Santa imagined.

The rendezvous that he was planning was a strategy of desperation. He set himself a problem in arithmetic: if his marriage had taken nine months to degenerate to this muddle, how many more months would it require to bust up completely?

Having reached the theatre where Lou-Lou disported, he bought an orchestra seat and handed a note to the clerk in the office.

"Please have it delivered."

The note read:

My dear Miss Lou-Lou, excuse my familiarity—it's the only name by which I know you. If you can spare me a few moments, I shall be most grateful. My business is urgent. It concerns a friend of yours—Richard Dak.

He had written it over as many times as a school-boy, his object being to spur curiosity and at the same time to prevent her from mistaking him for a stage-struck Johnny.

He felt furtive, almost wicked—a young man on the loose. He was doing no worse than Santa. Nevertheless, as he sank in his seat, he was thankful for the darkness.

During the intermission an attendant tapped him on the shoulder.

"At the end of the performance Miss Sandrelle will see you in her dressing-room."

He picked up a program and read Lou-Lou Sandrelle on the list of actresses. Sandrelle was as good a name as any if you had been christened Smith or Jones.

Miserably self-conscious, at the final lowering of the curtain he wandered into the foyer. Everyone respectable was departing.

"I have an appointment with Miss Sandrelle," he muttered, and was directed to the stage entrance.

Thence he was handed on through scenery in process of being dismantled, till he found himself outside a door in a gloomy passage. With a sinking heart he tapped.

"Come in. O, it's you!"

She grinned like a street-urchin, only partially clad and totally unembarrassed.

"I troubled you, Miss Sandrelle—"

"If you're a friend of Dicky's," she cut him short, "you're a friend of mine. What about him?"

Perching on a stool before the mirror, she began to powder her arms and throat. That done, she reddened her lips and dabbed her ears with perfume. Clive had never been treated to sights so intimate by any woman except Santa.

"You're a nice boy." She spoke again, attempting to put him at his ease. "I've a date with a beau. That's the reason I'm squeezing you into my only spare moment."

"Is your date with Dicky?"

"And if it is?" She glanced across her gleaming shoulder.

"He won't keep it." Clive sank his head. "We're companions in misfortune—adrift in the same boat. I hate to tell you. He's with my wife, and there he'll stay till I return to break up the party."

"The big, soft lump!" was her only comment.

Clive raised his eyes shyly. She was lovely, collected, entirely undaunted. With slackened speed she was brushing her fair hair, which Santa had declared was tinted.

"I'm wondering," he faltered, "why he couldn't be content with you?"

"I'm not his class, dearie." She smiled at her reflection. "You ought to paste him one on the nose, or, better still, go home and beat up your wife."

"Out of the question."

She turned in surprise, tapping her knee impatiently with her brush.

"Can't beat up your wife! Who's a better right? What's to prevent you?"

"A thousand reasons."

"It's not done in your set, I suppose?"

"That's one of them. But there are heaps of others. I love her and there's nothing she wouldn't do for me. She'd stake me with her last dollar."

"Then why's she messing about with my beau?"

Clive's gaze fell.

"She was married to him."

Dead silence.

Lou-Lou slipped off her stool and stole toward him.

"You poor guy! You're the one she gyped to marry Dicky—the one who was always crazy over her. You see, Dicky's told me."

"I know all about you, too." Clive stared up at her. "Santa's told me. I guess we haven't much to learn about each other."

"Let's compare notes," she suggested.

"He put you in this show," Clive mumbled, "and he makes you an allowance."

She nodded.

"I'm the same as you are with her; he's my baby, I'm crazy over him. He's never treated me right. He couldn't treat any woman right. When he sees a bit of fluff he thinks he likes better, he appeals to my chivalry to let him go. He appealed to my chivalry to clear out when he got married."

"He's a great one for appealing to women's chivalry. I'll bet that's how he's got round your cutie a second time. As far as I'm concerned, I don't really mind; he comes whimpering back when he's been hurt, like a grubby little boy—can't do without me. And I, like a sap, fall for him."

Clive struggled to his feet.

"You're fine. The little I know about women I've picked up from my wife."

She laughed good-naturedly and returned to her dressing.

"If you've ever borrowed any of her polo-coats, you must have picked up a mouthful."

Adjusting a chic hat, as she tugged it down across her forehead, she questioned:

"Want me to whistle Dicky off?"

Is that it?

"If you don't want to lose him."

"Ever try to lose a cat?" She flung at him her urchin smile.

Having arranged her furs, she turned.

"How do I look?"

"Stunning."

"Slim and sumptuous," she added to his praise. "I'll say I do!"

With a comradeship that was startling, she poked her arm through his.

"Take me somewhere. I'm hungry."

Leaving the deserted theatre, they plunged into Broadway. Not wishing to make themselves conspicuous, they entered a Childs. Across a marble-topped table she pinned him.

"You have a plan."

"I have, but I hadn't." He lowered his voice. "What you said about Dicky's trick of appealing to women's chivalry is true. My wife thinks she's making a new man of him. If she were to find out for a fact that's he's—"

"My very best beau." Lou-Lou stirred her coffee.

Clive nodded.

"Fur would fly. She'd kick him out."

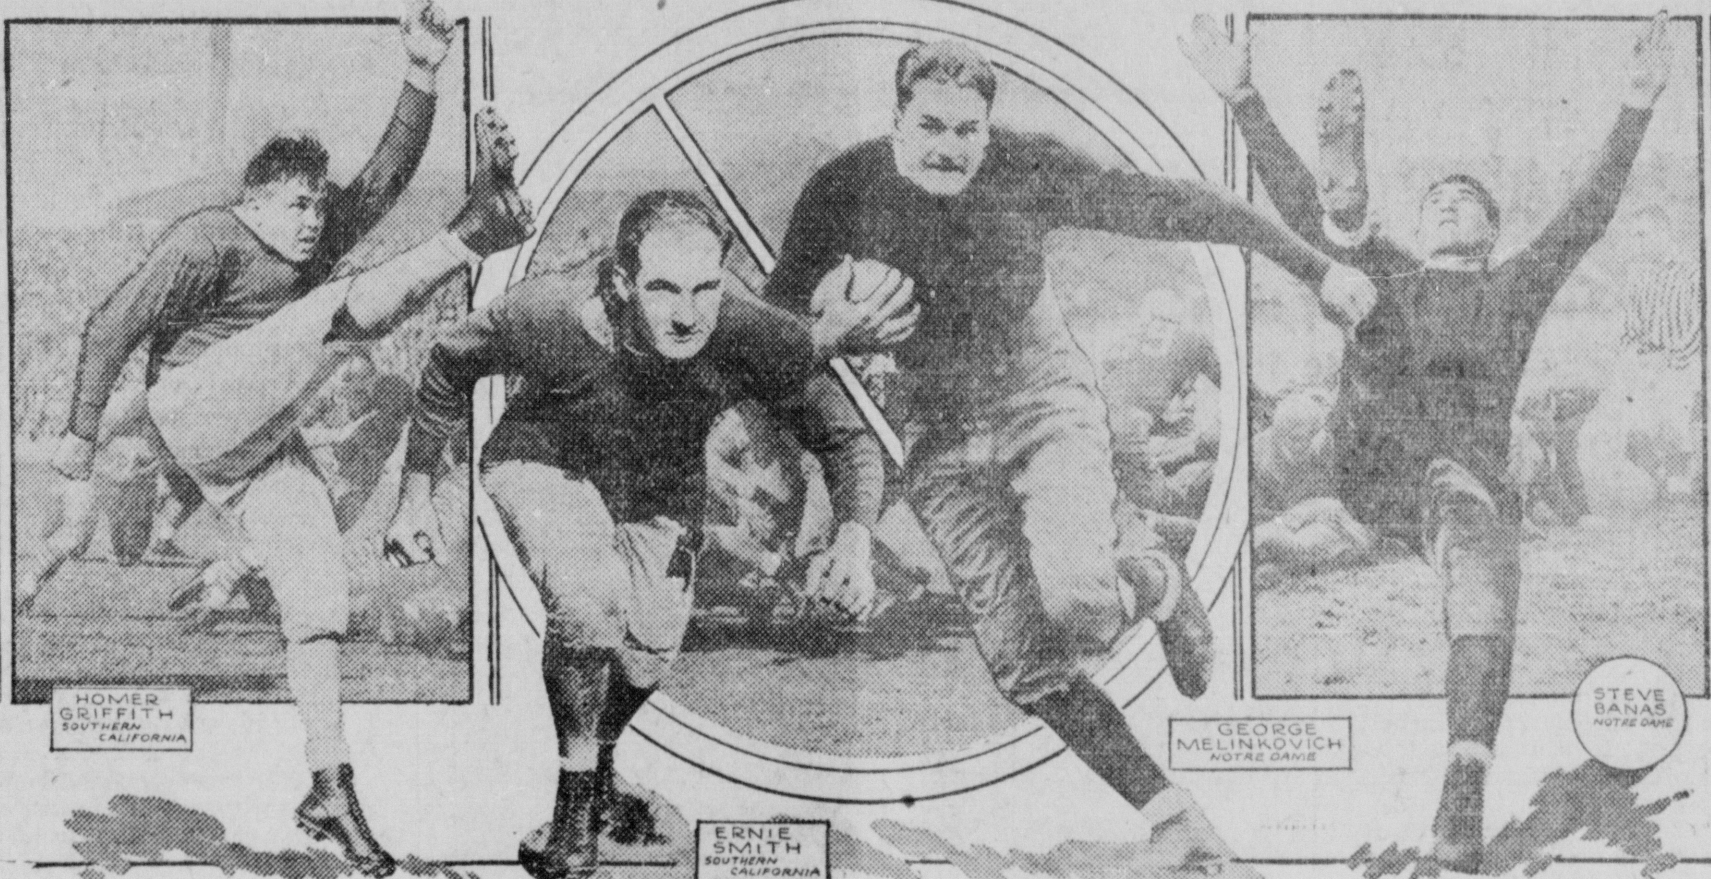

"Kick him back to me." Lou-Lou laughed gaily. "I get your idea."

They spoke in whispers, hatching their plot.

"We'll have to make it realistic," she warned him, "you mustn't mind if I insult you, too."

His last word at parting was, "I'll

Arnwine Is Held By Coroner's Jury

15-minute Inquest Finds He Fired Shot Which Killed Schoolgirl.

Doylestown, Dec. 3.—At an inquest that lasted only fifteen minutes Friday, a coroner's jury held that the death of Frances Hamper, 15-year-old Newton high school girl, was caused by a wound from a .32 calibre pistol bullet fired by Charles Arnwine.

Arnwine, 25, twice married and the father of three children, confessed to police that he shot the girl to death in a suicide pact, but that he had lacked courage to kill himself. He and Frances had planned to die together, he said, because of her parents' opposition to their love for each other.

The girl was slain November 13 and her body found in a tract of woodland, a mile from her home, a week ago.

"We hold Charles Arnwine," Friday's verdict added "for the next term of criminal court in Bucks county." The term will begin next Monday, and the grand jury will convene Monday morning.

Governor Rolph Drops Mooney Case

California Executive Declares "He's Through" After Seeing Legal Advisor.

Sacramento, Dec. 3 (AP)—Governor James Rolph, Jr., in a statement Friday said in effect he was through with the Mooney case.

The statement was made after the governor returned from San Francisco, where he had conferred with his legal counsel, Matt I. Sullivan, a former justice of the state supreme court, who has made a special study of the plea of Tom Mooney, convicted San Francisco Preparedness day bomber.

Sullivan recommended that Governor Rolph deny Tom Mooney's plea for a pardon. Sullivan's reply to a letter from fifteen men in the east who had attacked his position in the Mooney case, described his eastern critics as "parlor bolsheviks, accommodating publicity seekers, intellectual, irresponsible and tricky special pleaders."

LARGER NAVY IS APPROVED BY MUSSOLINI

Construction Of Cruisers And Torpedo Boats Ordered.

Rome, Dec. 3 (AP)—Premier Mussolini Friday ordered the navy department to lay down two light cruisers of 6,742 tons and two torpedo boats each of 615 tons.

The cruisers will be named Emanuele Filiberto and Eugenio di Savoia and the destroyers Spica and Ashore.

Part of 1931-1932 Program

Their construction is a part of the 1931-1932 program which was suspended under proposals for a year's holiday made at the Geneva conference by Dino Grandi, then minister of foreign affairs.

The cruisers are of the fast type known as the condottieri, which hitherto have been of 5,000 tons.

Experts, however, said they found that these were too light and increased their tonnage to 5,000 and finally to 6,700 tons.

British Experts, Charged Secrecy

The new cruisers were the focal point of a heated newspaper controversy when British experts published the statement that Italy was laying down a "secret" navy.

To this Allegation Italian experts replied that the ships were merely "vessels still on paper" because of the Grandi holiday.

Claimed Work Was Suspended

Several months ago Italian naval experts characterized as "ridiculous" reports published in London that Italy was building a larger navy in secret.

Contracts had been awarded early this summer for the construction of the four vessels at Naples, but before their keels were laid the work was suspended, one spokesman explained.

It was said that the 1931 and 1932 building program had been published in the parliamentary budget report.

With Us Daily

There is an evil which I have seen under the sun, and it is common among men:
A man to whom God hath given riches, wealth, and honour, so that he wanteth nothing for his soul of all that he desireth, yet God giveth him not power to eat thereof, but a stranger eateth it: this is vanity, and it is an evil disease.
If a man beget a hundred children, and live many years, so that the days of his years be many,
and his soul be not filled with good, and also that he have no burial; I say, that an untimely birth is better than he.
For he cometh in with vanity, and departeth in darkness, and his name shall be covered with darkness.
Moreover he hath not seen the sun, nor known any thing: this hath more rest than the other.
Yea, though he live a thousand years twice told, yet hath he seen no good: do not all go to one place?
All the labour of man is for his mouth, and yet the appetite is not filled.
For what hath the wise more than the fool? what hath the poor, that knoweth to walk before the living?
Better is the sight of the eyes
than the wandering of the desire:
this is also vanity and vexation
of spirit.
That which hath been is named already, and it is known that it is man: neither may he contend with him that is mightier than he.
Seeing there be many things that increase vanity, what is man
the better?
For who knoweth what is good for man in this life, all the days of his vain life which he spendeth as a shadow? for who can tell a man what shall be after him under the sun?

Car Presented to Coach Wood:
Not the largest, but by far the most impressive and most enthusiastic mass meeting was held in Brua chapel Tuesday evening in preparation for the Franklin and Marshall football game at Lancaster Thurs-

Tables Turned on Gettysburg:
Four years ago Thursday, Henry Bream, of Gettysburg, made a name for himself in collegiate football circles by kicking a drop kick in the closing minutes of a Gettysburg Franklin and Marshall football game at Lancaster which defeated the Lancasterians by the score 3-0.

Now a quartet of years has rolled by and Don Cragin, of the Blue and White team, turned the tables on Gettysburg by defeating her huckles by three points, scored by a drop kick from the 42-yard line. It was a masterly kick and timely. Less than two minutes remained to be played when the kick was made.

Former Student to Preach: The Rev. Earl J. Bowman, of Steelton,

the class of 1911 and of Seminary

REPEAL? BEER?
OR NEITHER? IS
SOLONS' QUERY

Dry Issue To Pop Up
As Soon As House
Is Seated.

By Herbert Plummer

Washington (AP).—Will the eighteenth amendment be repealed before congress provides the foaming glass of beer which anti-prohibitionists have long awaited? Or will neither repeal nor modification be achieved?

Those are the questions being pondered as congress prepares to open the "lame duck" session on December 5. In a session that must deal with problems as grave and pressing as any in the history of the country, the prohibition issue perhaps overshadows all.

Debate Limited In House

Members of the house hardly will have had time to settle comfortably in their seats before they will find this question staring them in the face. Speaker John N. Garner has served notice that on the first day of the session—in the first hour—he will permit consideration of a resolution calling for prohibition repeal.

Either Hattin Summers, chairman of the judiciary committee, or the white-haired Henry T. Rainey, democratic floor leader, probably will be the one to submit the resolution. Debate will be limited to not more than 40 minutes, and then what may be the history-making order will be given by the speaker:
"The clerk will call the roll."

If the resolution passes the house,
it must run the gauntlet in the senate.

Although Senator Charles Mc-Nary, assistant floor leader, has given assurance of the least possible delay in getting the resolution before the senate, no such speed in getting it actually adopted or defeated is expected.

Senate rules are vastly different from those in the house. There is no such method as that employed by the house in closing down debate. It is probably safe to predict that it will be discussed long and thoroughly there before any action is taken.

Meanwhile, beer advocates will not be marking time. Two days after the vote on repeal, the house ways and means committee, under the chairmanship of Collier, of Mississippi, will start hearings on proposed beer legislation. Prohibition-ists, brewers, wine producers and anti-prohibitionists have indicated to Collier that they will be present.
These hearings are expected to consume at least five days, and then, under the democratic plan, house consideration will follow.

In the senate also proposals for beer will be made. Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts, who led the fight in the democratic national convention for the repeal and beer plank, is ready to introduce a new beer bill providing for an alcoholic content of 3.2 per cent by weight or 3.75 per cent by volume and would include ale and porter.

In both houses there will be insistent demands on the part of all beer proponents for the speediest action possible.

But while prohibition and beer
will hold the center of the congressional stage at the beginning of the session, senators and representatives must sooner or later get down to work on problems that most vital affect the welfare of the country.

Other Problems Stand Out

These include such questions as inter-government debts, taxation, economy, unemployment relief, the annual supply bills, Philippine independence, soldiers' bonus and other veterans' legislation, and the St. Lawrence treaty.

The war debt problem stands out as a difficult one. Congress opposed further moratoriums and the scaling down of the war debts in the last session, and has shown no disposition to change its stand now.
Most members of congress who have expressed themselves on the subject recently are firm in opposing either cancellation or revision.

Economy and balancing the budget constitute another perplexing problem. Savings of $500,000-000 in federal expenditures and the consolidation of various agencies are expected to be proposed by the administration. A uniform manufacturers' sales tax also may be proposed. Such a measure was voted down in the last session.

(AP).—Charles William Ross was sentenced to death Thursday for the murder of Margaret Elizabeth Kepple in the Kenya jungle recently.

With a friend, Winifred Clark
Stevenson, Miss Kepple disappeared after a motor trip with Ross. Their bodies were found on the advice of a native wild doctor.

A second murder charge was filed against Ross, alleging that he also murdered Miss Stevenson. He was given thirty days to appeal. The defense had based its hope on a plea of insanity, alleging Ross suffered from blood lust.

ARCHERS GET DEER PRESERVE
Blagay, Mich. (AP).—Modern
Robin Hoods have set a 6,000-acre forest preserve set aside for their exclusive use here where they can hunt deer with the bow and arrow.
Huntmen with guns are not permitted to roam the range.

cent perfect and Allen 99.4. (Associated Press Photo)

Roosevelt Hints Special Session
If Congress Lags on Farm Relief

Warm Springs, Ga., Dec. 3 (AP).

—From the round of conferences being held on the slopes of Pine mountain there emerged the definite impression that President-elect Roosevelt would call a special session of congress if the next three months do not bring the enactment of farm-relief legislation.

Mr. Roosevelt, himself, at a late afternoon press conference, declined to "cross the bridge until I come to it," but from persons close to him there came word he was extremely anxious to have a farm relief measure enacted that would set up machinery for dealing with the 1933 crop.

Earlier in the day Mr. Roosevelt had talked with a group of Georgians, dealt with a delegation from the Crusaders for Economic Liberty in such a way as to stave off a threatened demonstration at Warm Springs and held a long talk about farm relief with L. J. Hill, president of the American Tobacco company.

During the day the impression grew among persons close to the Roosevelt circle of advisers that Senator Glass, of Virginia, was to be offered the post of secretary of the treasury. The president-elect referred questioners to his recent statement asserting that cabinet appointments would not be considered

Bandits Attack
Farmer's Family

Sunbury, Dec. 3.—Two masked bandits who invaded the home of J. W. Roadarmel, at Logan Run, and attacked members of the family
when denied money, were objects of a widespread search throughout the rural section, east of this city.
Angry farmers of the vicinity joined state police in a fruitless search for the pair.

Mrs. Roadarmel was seated in the parlor of her home with her son, Wesley, 13, Wednesday night, when there was a knock on the door.
Opening the door, the woman faced the muzzles of two revolvers in the hands of the two robbers who stalked into the house.

Demanding money, one of the bandits pressed a revolver against Mrs. Roadarmel's ribs. She screamed and fainted. Mr. Roadarmel, who was asleep upstairs, was aroused,
and rushing down, was met by one of the robbers, who brutally beat him into unconsciousness with the butt of a revolver.

Cutting the telephone wires, the pair proceeded to ransack the house but failed to find anything of value and fled.

TODAY'S TALK
By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

SUCCESS

THE word "success," more than any other, dominated me as a boy. I believe it does everyone. Now I think no more of it. In my own humble judgment I do not think that I have been much of a success.
I came across a sentence the other day, in my reading, that greatly impressed me and which brought me to this subject. It stated that "no man can attain the highest success until he has reached a point where he does not care for it."

True success, in the last analysis, becomes a feeling—a feeling that there is something within your most secret consciousness that you have brought out for the world, and given to it, something divinely precious with which you were born.

We are endowed at birth. The measure of our standing in the world, and among our fellows, is in proportion as to how we have performed with that endowment.

I believe that all great artists early leave all ambitions for success behind them. Their desire and hope lie only in the direction of true expression and honest revelation.

Was Franz Schubert a success? This great composer died in 1828 at the age of 31. He was very poor. His brief life was one of struggle and discouragement. He died still hungry, torn in heart and spirit. Recently I listened to the rendition of one of his glorious symphonies by New York's great Philharmonic Orchestra, directed by the wonderful Toscanini.

Schubert, himself, died before he had even the opportunity of listening to this creation of his own soul.
Schubert died an apparent failure—and yet his divine compositions have helped millions to understand success. Listening to one of his symphonies is like taking a trip to Heaven upon golden waves of ecstasy and through seas of rhythm and beauty.

What we have learned to properly appraise the values of life we do not have to worry about being a success.

"I got out of bed and went to the kitchen to wash my hands and face,"
the little girl told police.

"Grandpa was sitting down in the kitchen on a chair.
"I heard him tell grandma he had been following her all around the city.

"All of a sudden grandpa jumped up. He had a gun in his hand. He shot grandma in the back, two times.

and fell down by grandma."

BABY'S HEARTBEAT WINS
MOTHER $11,000 ESTATE

Lincoln, Neb., Dec. 3 (AP).—The beating of a child's heart was held by the Nebraska supreme court to constitute life even though the baby never breathed.

The decision entitled Pauline Stuertz, mother of the baby, to inherit all of the estate of her deceased husband, Henry J. Stuertz, who died in 1929. His parents, Casper and Elizabeth Stuertz, had claimed a half interest in his $11,000 estate on the ground the baby girl born after his death was born dead.

Judge James R. Dean, who wrote the supreme court opinion, said that since the vital functions of the child had not irrevocably ceased it could not lawfully be pronounced dead at birth.

FORTUNATE DREAM
The grate fire flickered in the room.
A desperate father in the gloom Sat thinking. Debts and deep despair

Were round about him everywhere:
A cold black pistol near at hand Betrayed the dreadful end he'd planned.
His fingers reached for it, and then
The skies grew strangely bright again!

People were talking of his son
And praising his achievements won.
Reporters came and wished to know
To just which college did he go.
"To none," said he. "In thirty-two
As many boys were forced to do.
He gave up school. What's more to say?
Except I'm very proud today.

"Always a fine boy? Always. Yes!
Now as a man a true success."
Perhaps it was a log that snapped
And woke the father as he napped.
He saw the pistol cold and black,
Opened a drawer and tossed it back.
"It seemed all hope was lost to me.
Thank God for such a dream!" said
he.

O. D. Young Named In Insult Order

Bankrupt Utility Auditors Claim
Collateral Held By Bankers
Is All Its Assets.

Chicago, Dec. 3 (AP)—Owen D. Young, internationally known financier, and eleven other New York bankers were named Friday in an order issued by Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley that they be examined upon loans their organizations made to Insult Utility Investments, Inc., now in receivership.

The order directed the clerk of the southern district federal court of New York to issue subpoenas duces tecum and hold hearings before a federal judge or referee.

Seek Collateral Return

It was granted upon petition of counsel for creditors of the investment company, who allege that collateral held by the New Yorkers for loans made to the firm include virtually all of its assets; that they were wrongfully pledged by the company, and that the banks knew of the "precarious" condition of the company when they granted the loans. They seek return of the collateral.

Camera Causes Harry Newman's Only Grid Hurt

Ann Arbor, Mich. (AP)—Harry Newman, University of Michigan backfield ace and Associated Press selection for the all-America eleven, apparently is immune to injury from any source except a camera.

Throughout the 1932 season which Michigan ended as champion of the Big Ten, Newman proved himself a great passer, an expert punt handler, supreme field general and brilliant in his running attack, but he never was forced to ask for time out because of injury in scrimmage or a game any time during his three years of college play.

The only time he was injured, according to Charles Hoyt, head trainer, was this season when he posed for a cameraman.

TOSSER DISCUS EQUALLY WELL WITH EITHER HAND

Seattle (AP)—Nicholas Lapik, discus tosser or Coach Clarence (Hec) Edmundson's University of Washington track and field squad, isn't permitting his right hand to have any secrets from his left.

Here's why. Lapik is an ambidextrous and thereby has presented a brand new problem with which Edmundson can wrestle.

Edmundson frankly admits he doesn't know which hand to concentrate on, for the sophomore has been tossing the platter out around 130 feet in practice with either hand.

LAUGH AT 'SCORING DISTANCE'

Kansas City (AP)—"Within scoring distance" doesn't necessarily mean very close to the Pembroke school football team. Its last 17 touchdowns scored during the 1932 season all came on plays from beyond the 30-yard line.

Recent Bride

their leagues in mid-season.

To Promote Rivalries

A closer supervision of the geographical make-up of leagues to eliminate expensive jumps and to promote civic rivalry between cities is proposed by the committee. It is not proposed to disturb the present make-up of any circuit, however.

Several leagues have been forced to suspend operation in mid-season due to major league clubs withdrawing support from their "farms," and the committee is urging a guarantee from the majors that they will stick it out for the season.

Other proposals by the group include stricter enforcement of legislation against tampering with players; continuance of a minor league press bureau, and a recommendation that broadcasting of home games be discontinued.

Hitch-hikers Attack And Rob Police Chief

Freeport, Dec. 3 (AP)—Chief of Police J. M. Cunningham is recovering from an attack by two hitch-hikers, who after beating and robbing him left him dragged in his automobile near Kittanning.

His service revolver and $50 were missing when he was found Thursday.

Dazed by the attack, Cunningham has been unable to give a coherent story of what took place.

FOUR E. C. U. STARS HURT IN CONFLICT WITH RICE

Fort Worth, Tex. (AP)—Hopes of Texas Christian football fans for an intercollegiate post-season game suffered a setback during the T. C. U.-Rice institute game. No fewer than four of their highly regarded players were severely hurt.

Ben Boswell, giant tackle, suffered three broken ribs; "Red" Oliver, halfback and leading Southwestern conference scorer, received a broken jaw; Blanford Spearman, backfield ace, was injured in the back, and Madison Pruitt, star end, wrenched his knee.

Confidence Man Caught In Swindle

Doc Brady, Wanted For Big Frauds, Says Small Money Now Is Matter
Of Life And Death.

St. Louis, Dec. 3 (AP)—Thomas Brady, the erstwhile Doc of the notorious Chapple Moran gang, and who is wanted in Illinois, Missouri and other states for confidence games, was arrested here Friday in a police cleanup of a $23 swindle.

His identity was not learned at first, but his finger prints disclosed he was Brady, wanted here for complicity in a $40,000 swindle. He was not the debonair figure of former days. His suit was shiny and his hair was gray. Chief of Detectives Robert Kaiser asked him why he was swindling poor men.

"That's easy," Brady said, "the rich men have all committed suicide. This small money is a matter of life and death to me now."

Crush tissue paper, dip it in kerosene and use for cleaning the bath room fixtures. Wipe off with more crushed paper.

Archbishop Dies In Ten-foot Fall

New Mexico Prelate Stumbles Into Garage Basement; Won Hearts Of Indians.

Santa Fe, Dec. 3 (AP)—A ten-foot fall into the basement of a garage Friday fatally injured the Most Rev. Albert T. Daeger, Archbishop of Santa Fe and the Catholic Archdiocese of Northern New Mexico.

The prelate's skull was fractured. He died at a hospital three hours later.

Friends believed the archbishop, who was 60, fell in opening a door leading from the street to the basement of the garage. The basement was dark and it was thought he did not see the steps in time to prevent his fall. He was found by a garage employee.

At his residence it was said the prelate had gone for a walk and apparently had decided to drop into the office of the garage to chat with some of the employees as was his custom.
